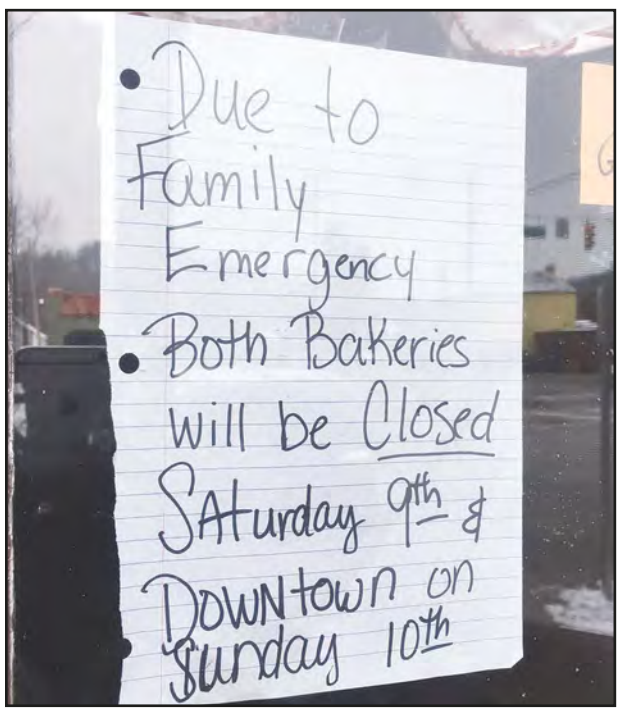
Horst the baker, wife injured crossing street downtown



By TRENTON SCROGGINS

Horst's Little Bakery Haus on Main Street in downtown Madison closed early Friday morning after Horst Moehlmann and his wife, Mary, were hit by a vehicle while crossing the street near Main and Cragmont.

Angela Gregory, the daughter-in-law of the couple, said Horst sustained a minor wrist injury, while his wife was believed to have suffered severe head trama, possibly a fractured skull.

Mary Moehlmann was flown to University of Louisville hospital immediately after the accident, which occurred before daylight around 6 a.m. She was conscious and in a stable condition by 10 a.m., Gregory said, while the hospital performed several tests.

Gregory asked the public to please keep Mary and the family in their prayers.

A sign on the bakery's downtown location said "due to family emergency, both bakeries will be closed Saturday 9th and downtown on Sunday 10th."

"The bakery will be closed for a couple days but we will try to be opened back up on Monday," Gregory said in a text to the Courier Friday morning.

Moehlmann moved to the U.S. from Germany in 1972 when he was 24 after seeing an ad in a newspaper for someone to come to work in a bakery in the United States. The ad was placed by John Dieken, who was from the same hometown, and had opened a bakery in Madison.

When Moehlmann moved to Madison he spoke no English, but learned by going places and listening to people talk.

He worked in Dieken's Bakery for 29 years before starting his own in 2004.

After living in the United States for 37 years, Horst Moehlmann became a U.S. citizen Sept. 17, 2009.

"It took me a long time," Horst Moehlmann said that day. "It has a lot of benefits to be a citizen."

He said one of the reasons he waited to take the test for citizenship was because people had told him the test was difficult. However, after studying for two weeks to prepare, he took the test in Indianapolis and was sworn in.

To celebrate his citizenship, the other businesses in the strip mall around his bakery on the hilltop at the time threw a surprise party with a large sign announcing his citizenship and a cake with red, white and blue stars on it.

Mary Moehlmann said it was a good time to apply for citizenship because he had his children and grandchildren living here and he had no desire to go back to Germany to do more than visit.

The Sweetest Bakery Contest in America last year named Horst's Little Bakery Haus the "sweetest of the sweet" in Indiana for 2018 in the second annual search for the sweetest shop in the country.

Eyes on the jail 24/7

What day to day looks like from inside

By TALI HUNT

The nerve center of the Jefferson County Jail's security and major operations take splace from the control room in the physical center of the area where the general population is housed. There is a jail officer posted inside the control room 24 hours a day, seven days a week, 365 days a year to keep watch.

From this room, the officer on duty controls the doors — unlocking one at a time to allow staff or working inmates through, and what lights are on or off inside the facility and more.

This is the only officer who can speak directly with inmates on a 24/7 basis because their requests come to the control room from phones in the housing units.

Only one door can be opened at a time throughout the jail halls. If the duty officer in the security center sees problems in an area, the officer cannot leave the control room post to go to the area of the problem. Eyes must remain on the totality of the jail at all times.

Another task — not nearly as lofty as those above — has been added to the duty list. This officer also now must flush the toilets in the cells because inmates discovered they could clog toilets, causing flooding through the floor into the next level of the facility, an action that was taken too many times.

In September 2017, Jefferson County commissioners and council members were given 180 days to develop a plan of action after an annual inspection in August found several areas of noncompliance within Indiana Jail Standards.

Since that time, Sheriff's Department officials, Jefferson County commissions and members of the Jefferson County Council have wrestled with how to address the problems.

In September 2018, consultants presented to county officials a feasibility study of needs. That report noted that within the previous nine months, the Jefferson County Jail had an Average Daily Population (ADP) of more than 150. As of August 2018, about 157 were housed in the jail, which has a detention housing capacity of 109 rated beds. Over the last 10 years, the jail has seen a 200 percent increase in its ADP. In 2017, the ADP totaled 140.

That ADP number also makes it impossible for the county to be in compliance with the state-mandated ratio of one jail employee to every 12 inmates. The jail was allocated for 18 floor officers and 5 support officers for 2019. As of March 1, 2019, there were three floor officer vacancies.

The report also noted the rising population trends are expected to continue. Earlier this year, the jail's population during one day hit 180.

County officials recently conducted two public meetings to try to answer questions and to listen to concerns about what needs to happen.

Last Tuesday Madison Courier staff members were given a tour of the jail to provide the public with a look inside the facility at what the numbers and concerns mean in terms of day-to-day operations. Those photographs and the explanations of what is happening are on Pages A4,5.

Education chief says armed teachers 'bad, bad, bad idea'

By ERNEST ROLLINS
(Bloomington) Herald-Times

School safety measures are best determined with the help of local community officials, says Jennifer McCormick, state superintendent of public instruction.

With this year's session of the Indiana General Assembly halfway completed, school safety and other education matters such as teacher pay remain priorities. Bills that propose providing money to train teachers to carry a weapon in schools and to increase funding for K-12 education are advancing.

McCormick said she is against state lawmakers' push to arm teachers in response to recent shootings.

"I have not been a supporter of 'let's arm teachers and hope for the best.' I think that's a bad, bad, bad idea," McCormick recently told local educators and the public at the MCCSC Co-lab. "The risks outweigh the rewards."

Potentially allowing armed school staff and faculty is one solution being advanced at the Indiana Statehouse to address recent shootings.

House Bill 1253 creates a firearm safety and training curriculum for teachers, school staff and employees that is focused on responding to a school shooting situation. It also allows school districts to apply for state dollars to train teachers and staff who volunteer to carry firearms on school grounds.

The identity of those who enroll, participate and complete this training would remain confidential, the bill states.

Teachers and school staff eligible to access these training dollars cannot be someone who is suspended, has a disciplinary complaint filed against them or is currently under a criminal investigation. Also, only those working at a school district or charter school that already allows firearms in or on school property and passes a personality test could be trained.

Supporters of providing teachers this training argue it does not take away a school's ability to implement other measures to protect children. McCormick said the issue with the grant is that increasing the number of schools and people eligible to receive this money could deplete state funds set aside for school safety, and quickly.

McCormick said while school boards have had the authority to arm teachers since 2013, only a few have done so. She said one reason school boards may be leery about taking advantage of that law could be insurance costs.

However, she said she understands how, in communities where emergency response times are 30 minutes at best, having a team trained in the district to respond to emergencies is a school safety solution. One example of this in Jay County in eastern Indiana.

"I understand that, and I'm not opposed to that, but you can pay for that training and the weaponry now through other mechanisms," McCormick said.

She said school safety is much broader than the alarming but infrequent school shootings.

AG encourages residents to report clergy abuse

Indiana

INDIANAPOLIS — Attorney General Curtis Hill said his office is providing an online form enabling individuals to more easily report instances involving alleged abuse by clergy. Hill said any forms submitted may be disclosed to law enforcement agencies in accordance with Indiana law. Attorney generals in Illinois and Michigan are among those in 14 states investigating clergy abuse in the Roman Catholic church. Roman Catholic dioceses in Indiana recently have published lists of priests credibly abused of sexually abusing minors. An investigation by two Texas newspapers reported last month about 380 Southern Baptist church leaders and workers have been accused of sexual misconduct since 1998, leaving more than 700 victims. Hill advised that to report incidents involving minors, individuals should call the Indiana Child Abuse and Neglect Hotline at 1-800-800-5556.

Rum in cold car with mom, dead baby

INDIANAPOLIS — Court documents say a woman and her dead infant daughter were found in a car with no gas and a dead battery about a block from where the woman was expected to leave the child with baby sitters. A probable cause affidavit filed Thursday in support of a neglect charge against Rachel McAfee, 36, says the temperature was 9 degrees inside the car, her daughter Emma was on the front floorboard, a bottle of rum was nearby and the woman appeared intoxicated. Police said McAfee had postpartum depression, suffered from alcoholism and might have been suicidal. They said she and Emma were last seen leaving home about 7 a.m. Monday. They were found Tuesday afternoon. McAfee was hospitalized with frostbite. A message seeking comment was left for McAfee's attorney.

Notre Dame alumni give $20M for dorm

SOUTH BEND — A Notre Dame University graduate and his wife have donated $20 million to the school for a men's residence hall. The South Bend Tribune reported Wednesday the money from John and Mollie Baumer is going toward constructing Baumer Hall. The four-story building is expected to open in August. The hall will accommodate about 250 students and will include a two-story lounge, reading and study rooms, a chapel and community kitchen. The lower level also will feature space for food sales. John Baumer, a 1990 graduate, grew up in South Bend. Mollie Baumer graduated from Saint Mary's College. The couple, now living in California, donated $3 million to the university in 2015 to endow the men's head lacrosse coaching position.

Dumped dead dogs found in Jennings Co.

VERNON — Authorities say a dozen dead dogs were found dumped in a wooded area of southern Indiana. Jennings County Animal Control officials met with sheriff's department detectives this week about the dogs, which were found near a roadway by a motorist driving in the county on Feb. 28. Investigators say they were told the dead dogs weren't there the previous day. They included three mature dogs and nine puppies, including two that were about a week or two old. Cause of death for the dogs wasn't immediately determined. Anyone with information about the dogs is asked to call the Jennings County sheriff's office.

Election board nixes using paper ballots

VINCENNES — Election officials have nixed an idea to save money by not using voting machines during an upcoming primary vote. Knox County Clerk David Shelton had said that going "old school" and using paper ballots would save money that would typically be spent to program voting machines as well as additional costs. The Vincennes Sun-Commercial reports the county's Election Board on Thursday passed on the idea. Shelton said the programming cost was more than $3,000 plus additional expenses. He said printing paper ballots would likely cost less than $1,500. The single-race City Council primary with two Democratic candidates is May 7. Local Democratic Party leaders opposed the paper ballot idea. Election board member Dale Webster said he thought it would cause "confusion" at the polls.

Man freezes buck in bid to dodge rule

HOLLAND — Conservation officers say a southwestern Indiana man illegally killed a deer most hunters "would consider a buck of a lifetime," but hoped he might skirt a rule by freezing it for later. The state Department of Natural Resources said Mark Gill, 56, violated Indiana's one-buck rule by taking a non-typical 20-point buck with more than 200 inches of antler during the 2016 season after already taking a buck earlier in the archery season. Conservation officers say the Holland man froze the second buck until the 2017 season before checking it in with officials. Gill pleaded guilty to misdemeanor charges of unlawful taking of a white-tailed deer and providing false information. His plea agreement with Dubois County prosecutors includes a 2-year suspension of his hunting license and 100 hours of community service.

2 firefighters hurt, woman killed

ST. JOE — Authorities say a woman is dead and two firefighters were hospitalized with injuries after a house fire. Crews responded Thursday evening to the fire in the small DeKalb County community of St. Joe, about 125 miles northeast of Indianapolis. The sheriff's office sai a woman was found dead inside the home. At least one other person at the home was able to get out. One firefighter had what were described as minor injuries and the other had more severe injuries. They reportedly suffered from smoke inhalation. The cause of the fire is under investigation.

Police identify driver killed in fiery crash

PORTAGE — Police have released the name of a man who died after the SUV he was driving crashed into the back of a semi-truck trailer along an interstate in northwestern Indiana and burst into flames. Indiana State Police say the SUV was westbound Tuesday night along Interstate 80/94 near Portage when it struck the flatbed trailer loaded with steel. The truck driver, a 48-year-old western Michigan man, reported feeling something hit from behind, pulled to the side of the road and called police. The SUV caught fire and police say Augustin J. Carreon, 30, of Porter, was trapped inside. Other motorists tried unsuccessfully to get the doors open. Police say Carreon was pronounced dead at the scene. The Porter County crash is under investigation.

Kentucky

Fund for LGBT Catholics started

LOUISVILLE — A couple involved in the 2015 U.S. Supreme Court ruling that legalized same-sex marriage has started a scholarship to help Catholic LGBT students at the University of Louisville. The Courier Journal reported the scholarship by Greg Bourke and Michael DeLeon will be given out annually, starting this May. Preference will be given to LGBT students who are Catholic or graduated from a Catholic high school. The two are longtime members of the Our Lady of Lourdes parish community in Louisville and got married in Canada in 2004. They later filed a lawsuit that, along with lawsuits by other couples, launched the Supreme Court case. Bourke said "You know you think about what kind of legacy you want to leave ... this is something, I think, that will live on."

Sinkhole at Kentucky zoo; no injuries

LOUISVILLE — A zoo has closed while engineers study a newly discovered sinkhole nearly as large as a football field. Louisville Zoo spokeswoman Kyle Shepherd told news outlets the sinkhole was found Wednesday in an undeveloped area away from any zoo animals. She said no people or animals were reported injured and no buildings damaged. Louisville Metro Emergency Services Director Jody Meiman says officials estimate the sinkhole is about 50 yards by 85 yards and about 50 feet deep in spots. The nearby Louisville Mega Cavern also said Wednesday it is temporarily closed because of a 3.4 earthquake reported Tuesday in neighboring Tennessee. Officials said they haven't determined whether the earthquake caused the sinkhole. Meiman says causes could include rain or "natural occurrences" underground.

High-tech firm plans facility, 100 jobs

ERLANGER — Gov. Matt Bevin says a high-tech manufacturer plans to open a new facility in Boone County and create 100 jobs. A statement from Bevin's office on Thursday said Cincinnati-based Meyer Tool Inc. plans to acquire and renovate an 83,000-square-foot property near Erlanger and expand its footprint in the aerospace industry. The statement says it will be the company's 12th facility that supplies parts to the aerospace and industrial gas turbine engine industries. Beau Easton is one of the owners of Meyer Tool. He says the new plant's location is ideal because it's close to headquarters and near another northern Kentucky facility so it will create "a lot of logistical and synergistic opportunities."

Man drowns on flooded road

PADUCAH — Authorities say a man pulled from flood water over a roadway has died. News outlets report emergency crews responded to a call Tuesday evening reporting a vehicle in high water with two people inside. McCracken County Sheriff Matt Carter said the driver, Helen Hall, 61, was able to get to safety, but her passenger, William Villines, 59, died. McCracken County Coroner Amanda Melton listed his cause of his death as drowning with a contributing factor of hypothermia. Carter said the sheriff's department is investigating and plans to consult with prosecutors to determine whether any charges should be filed. Officials say numerous roads remain closed in the area due to flooding.

No charges in Indiana trooper shooting of Linden man

By DAVE BANGERT
(Lafayette) Journal and Courier

LINDEN – No charges will be filed against Daniel Organ, the Indiana State Police trooper who shot Glenn Rightsell, a Linden business owner who was working on his daughter's stalled Chevy Tahoe along the side of U.S. 231 on Dec. 28, Montgomery County Prosecutor Joseph Buser announced Wednesday afternoon.

In a 17-page investigation report, released more than nine weeks after Rightsell died, Buser concluded that "sufficient evidence exists that Mr. Organ was subjectively in fear of death or serious bodily injury and that he honestly believed a gun was being drawn to shoot him."

The family of Glenn Rightsell, though, stand by their belief that he was doing nothing wrong that night.

"He was fired upon for no reason," said Bruce Kehoe, an Indianapolis-based attorney for Gigi Rightsell, Glenn Rightsell's widow.

Rightsell and her son, Jesse Vaught, were given a copy of the report shortly after lunch Wednesday during a meeting with Buser, about two hours before the prosecutor made his findings public.

"Unfortunately, the prosecutor is left with not only proving criminal conduct, but also disproving self-defense, and you have no direct witness to contradict a trooper's statement, even though there's a mountain of circumstantial evidence," Kehoe said. "We think the civil side of the case will certainly be quite different. I would expect the truth will surface."

Buser said he based his decision on interviews with Organ, other officers who arrived to back him up, fours drivers on U.S. 231 who passed the scene, with Gigi Rightsell, Glenn Rightsell's wife, a neighbor who shot video of the scene from his porch after the shots were fired, among others.

Buser's report laid out a chronology based on that.

The prosecutor said that Rightsell, as family members claimed, had notified Montgomery County police that he would be going to U.S. 231, near County Road 550 North and just south of North Montgomery High School, to work on the SUV. According to Buser, that information was passed along to Indiana State Police, but ISP dispatchers did not broadcast that to troopers on the road.

So Buser said Organ, who had put a sticker on the SUV earlier in the afternoon to note that he'd checked on it, was unaware that Rightsell had done that when he approached the vehicle around 6:35 p.m. that night.

According to the prosecutor's report, Organ pulled up behind the SUV to investigate.

As he moved to the front of the vehicle, Organ reported that he could see Rightsell's holstered gun through the gap under the open hood. Rightsell had a legal permit to carry the .380 Walther semi-automatic pistol he was carrying that night.

He also saw the white Dodge Challenger, with Colorado plates, that Rightsell was driving and had parked with its trunk open just in front of the Chevy Tahoe.

Organ, who didn't have a dashboard camera in his car or a body camera, told that he turned on a flashlight and, according to the report, stated, "Hello. Trooper Organ, Indiana State Police. Don't reach for your gun. Do you need help?"

Organ told investigators that "Mr. Rightsell looked at (him) and pushed his body away from the Tahoe, rolling upon his left hip. Mr. Rightsell also brought his right hand back. To Mr. Organ, this motion was consistent with drawing a handgun."

Buser wrote: "At that point, Organ fired shots at Rightsell, one of which struck him in the face causing injuries that later resulted in his death while he was receiving treatment at the emergency room at Franciscan Health in Crawfordsville."

Organ also told a Montgomery County deputy who arrived after he fired the shots and while Rightsell was lying near the front of the Tahoe: "I told him not to reach for it, and he grabbed it."

Family members have shared photos with the J&C that show three bullet holes in the side and hood of the Chevy Tahoe.

The prosecutor's report says Organ recalled firing three times, but based on evidence from the scene he fired six times.

Video shot by the neighbor shows police removing Rightsell's gun, still in its holster, after making him walk on his knees to where they stood behind the SUV.

Buser's report said police officers knew Rightsell still had his gun and were unsure whether anyone else was in the Tahoe or the Dodge Challenger in front of it when they ordered Rightsell to crawl their direction, so they could handcuff him.

The report said medical personnel started treating Rightsell at 6:56 p.m., which would be 20 minutes after the shots were fired. The report said Rightsell was taken to the hospital in an ambulance, not in a police car, as some have speculated.

Rightsell died at 8:48 p.m. that night, after complaining that he couldn't swallow. He'd been shot in the face.

Buser said law enforcement officers weren't able to interview him for his version of what happened that night. Dr. Roland Kohr did an autopsy and reported the cause of death as homicide, according to Buser's report.

But a nurse interviewed at Franciscan Health Crawfordsville spoke with Rightsell about it, a scene captured in Buser's report.

"(The nurse) recalled asking Mr. Rightsell, 'What did you do?'" the report says. "Mr. Rightsell responded, 'I don't know. He just walked up and started shooting.' (The nurse) recalled Mr. Rightsell making this comment twice. She described Mr. Rightsell's demeanor as calm and cooperative."

Another nurse interviewed told investigators that Rightsell's "primary concern was someone contacting his wife for her to come to the hospital," according to the report.

Buser said there was no evidence to show that Organ "acted inconsistently with the training he received in order to be become an ISP trooper."

"From the facts and circumstances known to Mr. Organ at the time of the shooting, there is insufficient evidence to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that Mr. Organ's actions were not objectively reasonable," Buser wrote.

Vaught, Rightsell's stepson, said the report didn't add up.

"No," Vaught said, "I don't buy anything he said."

Ken Steen lives across U.S. 231 from the scene. He went to his porch after he heard what he thought were knocks at his door that night. He later figured he'd heard the shots. He started recording the scene, not realizing that someone had just been shot.

"Damn, I'd like to be able to tell you I'm surprised, but not even a little bit," Steen said after reading about the prosecutor's report. "In my opinion, there was easily enough benefit of the doubt that they should have let a jury decide it. Unfortunately, juries also have a tendency to place law enforcement on a pedestal based on popular glorification. So I'd have been surprised if the jury had convicted."

The case has spawned a couple of Facebook discussion groups called "Justice for Glenn Rightsell," T-shirt sales and demonstrations on weekends on the Montgomery County Courthouse square.

"This is not good," said Maelene Grenat, a longtime friend of Glenn Rightsell. "There is going to be outrage today."

Gigi Rightsell did not immediately respond for comment Wednesday afternoon.

Capt. David Bursten, public information officer for Indiana State Police, said the agency would let the prosecutor's report stand on its own, without additional comment from ISP. He said that would have been the case if Buser had decided differently, as well.

Organ had been on desk duty at the Indiana State Police Post in Lafayette since Jan. 7, more than a week after the shooting. On Wednesday, that status changed. Bursten said Organ could now "work as assigned by the post commander."

"He will assume his regular duties," Bursten said.

Bursten said Organ did not care to comment on the incident or the prosecutor's report.

Kehoe said he and Rightsell's family plan to go over evidence collected in the prosecutor's investigation.

"We expect we'll find the truth in there," Kehoe said. "There will be a day of reckoning, I suspect."

Son reportedly shot state trooper dad with service weapon over video games

By LINCOLN WRIGHT
South Bend Tribune

GRANGER — The 11-year-old boy charged with shooting his father, an Indiana state trooper, used his dad's service weapon and was upset because his parents had confiscated his video games, records show.

On Feb. 22, the boy shot his father, Indiana State Police officer Matt Makowski, in the buttocks with the officer's .45-caliber duty weapon, according to court documents. The boy got the gun from Makowski's locked police vehicle, parked outside the family's home on Conover Drive in Granger, the records show.

Makowski later told police he kept his weapon locked in his vehicle because he did not want his kids to have access to it.

Police arrived at the family's home about 11 p.m. on reports of a shooting. The boy surrendered without incident and police found his mother and father in the master bedroom. Makowski was transported to the hospital, and police have said his condition is "steadily improving."

The boy's mother told police she and her husband were asleep when she heard a loud "gong" sound and her husband began screaming in pain. Realizing her husband had been shot, she went to look for her son and found the service weapon on the floor outside the room. As she secured the gun and called 911, she saw her son walking up the stairs with a BB gun and Makowski's duty taser, according to court records.

She locked the bedroom door until police arrived, the records show.

The boy later told police he wanted a Play Station, an Xbox and a computer, and that he was "going to get these simple things, or there would be a Part 2," court documents say.

The boy also said he tested the taser out on the family's dog prior to the shooting, according to the documents. The boy told police he intended to shoot his father in the head but couldn't do so because of the way his dad was lying in bed.

Court documents say the boy has a history of behavior problems at school. His parents had recently taken his video games and removed them from the home.

St. Joseph County prosecutors have filed a petition against the boy alleging delinquency — the juvenile equivalent of a criminal charge — for attempted murder.

Last year, St. Joseph County police logged a report indicating the boy was involved in a "possible battery" that injured an 8-year-old neighbor boy, who was treated in the emergency room at Saint Joseph Regional Medical Center. Police have not released further information on the incident.

Jefferson Co. Jail

AS OF MARCH 5, 2019

Desk

In 2018, Jefferson County Jail staff completed 1,521 bookings. When local law enforcement officers make an arrest, they bring individuals into the booking area, most often through the sally port, a garage. When those arrested are booked in, they are assessed for classification and it is determined where they will be housed. Josh Skaggs (behind desk, center) is one of the officers who completes booking procedures. These procedures include completing paperwork, taking booking photos, collecting personal belongings and issuing inmates clothing to wear while in custody. A one-day sample pulled from the jail's records during a recent feasibility study showed the Jefferson County Jail housed inmates with 13 different classifications. And within those classifications, there are inmates that cannot be housed together due to past violent or otherwise unsafe behavior.

Bench in Booking/ Isolation/holding cells

The jail's 2018 annual report states the average daily population was 149.2 inmates. Some inmates may not be able to be placed with the general population when they enter because of a lack of space inside the dayrooms. This had led the jail staff to use isolation cells, the detoxification tank and the facility's single padded cell to hold inmates. The padded cell is also sometimes used to temporarily hold juveniles. Juveniles are not allowed to be held in the same housing area of the facility as adults who are arrested and inmates.

Medical

Last year, the sheriff's department brought on a full-time nurse at the jail. She works in a small clinic off the booking area where she can provide basic medical services — inmates are still taken to the hospital if they are suffering from a serious ailment or injury and for specialize care, like obstetrics. A physician also regularly visits the facility and a dentist comes in a few times a month to see the inmates and provide what care they may need. If there is money on the accounts of inmates who see the nurse or doctors, a small fee is taken to help cover the costs of the health care resources. The jail's budget has to cover the rest of the bill.

Laundry

With the overcrowding, the facilities infrastructure is being used more than expected. The laundry machines are no exception. In order to keep up with the inmates' dirty laundry the washers and dryer run almost 24/7, according to the jail staff. And, in order to keep outfits together and get them back to the right area of the jail when they are ready to be worn, the clothes are collected inside of a cloth bag. The cloth bags, containing whole outfits, are taken through the wash and dry cycles without being emptied. This is done to help keep items together and to cut down on the labor needed to do laundry — no one has to separate, sort or fold. But, the bags are harder on the machines than the clothes would be if they were washed normally due to the weight of the wet bags full of wet clothes being agitated around the machines on such high frequency.

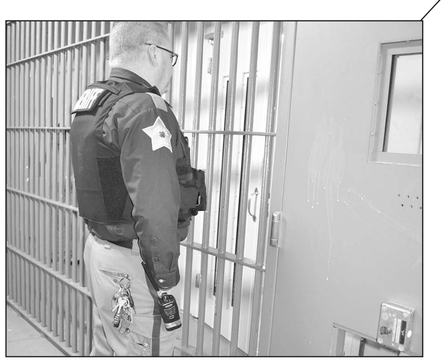
Food prep

The sheriff is responsible for providing all necessary amenities for inmates to live. This includes food and beverages. The inmates at the Jefferson County Jail are served three 2,800-calorie meals a day through a contractor called Canteen Services. On Tuesday, March 5, 2019, a canteen service employee worked with a handful of Jefferson County inmates to prepare 144 lunches of hot dogs, sauerkraut, beans and more. In 2018, the sheriff's department spent more than $271,000 on inmate meals. They've budgeted for $300,000 for 2019 to try to prepare to cover the cost of more meals as the population remains well over the facility capacity and expected operations cost.



Women's housing

The recreation and commissary rooms are used for programming offered by outside organizations that come in to the jail to offer classes and different kinds of community. On March 5, 2019, some of the female inmates participated in one of a series of classes designed to help them earn their GED either before or after their release. The commissary room was used that morning for time with employees from LifeSprings for counseling. The rooms used for these programs and others are in the men's part of the jail. The women are housed (left) in the old jail, their cells surrounded by the original metal bars. State jail standards require that male and female inmates be housed in areas that are sight and sound separated. This means the male inmates should not be able to see or hear the female inmates and vice versa when they are inside their housing units.

Men's housing

Male inmates are housed in dayrooms and dormitories on the second floor (right) of the facility. Also on the second floor are rooms intended to be commissary and recreation. State standards require a 12-inmate-to-one-jail officer ratio throughout all hours of each day. On March 5, 2019, there were 144 inmates in the jail for lunch, so the Jefferson County Jail should have had 12 officers on duty during that shift. The Jefferson County Jail budget provided salaries for 18 full-time floor officers and 5 support officers in 2018. When the jail was cited in 2017 by the Indiana Department of Corrections, one of the areas that failed to meet state standards was staffing. And, because of the inability to meet the staffing, areas of the jail can't be used as meant to be — the recreation room (left) being one. There are not enough jail officers on staff to be able to monitor inmates outside their dayrooms.

30-year sentence in chase, death of officer

SCOTTSBURG, Indiana (AP) — A man who authorities say started a southern Indiana police chase that led to an officer's death has been sentenced to 30 years in prison.

Benjamin Eads, 35, of Freedom was given his punishment Friday in a Scott County courtroom after pleading guilty in February. The charges include auto theft and resisting law enforcement, which led to a death.

Authorities say Eads fled a traffic stop on Dec. 12 , triggering a police chase during which Charlestown Officer Benton Bertram's vehicle struck a tree. He was dead at the scene.

The 33-year-old Bertram had been a Charlestown officer for nine years.

10 charged in fentanyl trafficking from Phoenix

EVANSVILLE, Indiana (AP) — Federal authorities have accused 10 Indiana and Arizona residents of bringing large amounts of the drug fentanyl into Evansville from Phoenix.

Prosecutors say they have indicted the men and women, who are expected to have their initial hearings Friday in U.S. District Court in Evansville.

All are charged with conspiracy to distribute fentanyl, and some are facing charges of money laundering and fraudulent firearm purchases. Prosecutors say they could spend up to 20 years in prison if convicted.

The Centers for Disease Control says illegally made fentanyl has a heroin-like effect and often is mixed with heroin or cocaine.

• Education chief

"A big piece of it's got to be the social-emotional, relational piece of it," McCormick said. "You've got to know your community, your kids, your families."

Thirty-five percent of new teachers are leaving within the first five years, according to McCormick, and 88 percent of them cite low pay as the reason.

The other top reason is working conditions. McCormick said while local administrators can control teacher's working conditions, increasing teacher pay would require the help of the state Legislature.

McCormick said administrators need to pause and acknowledge how full teachers' plates really are, and not add to that load without being really thoughtful and caring. Additionally, she said, there needs to be a purposeful support system to help teachers be successful.

As for teacher pay, McCormick said the Department of Education requested a 3 percent increase for education. She said this does not mean that each district would see their budget increase 3 percent.

House lawmakers last week approved a budget bill that included increasing K-12 funding an additional $611 million over the biennium. It also included $30 million a year for Teacher Appreciation Grants to reward effective teachers.

"The House budget proposal funds Indiana's vital services and addresses top priorities while remaining fiscally responsible and maintaining healthy reserves," state Rep. Todd Hutson, R-Fishers and co-chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, said in a news release about the budget bill's passage. "We kept our commitment to educators and Hoosier children by increasing funding for education, school safety and the Department of Child Services."

However, Indiana House Democrats argue that the passed budget does not address the state's education issues, among others like health care and working families' needs. They cited bills that did not advance that would have directly increased teacher paychecks.

Madison To Host Gold Cup

Regatta reaches 2-year deal with H1 Unlimited Series

By DAVID CAMPBELL
Courier Staff Writer
dcampbell@madisoncourier.com

Two years after financial concerns forced the Madison Regatta to scale back to a four-boat exhibition, the site pulled off arguably its greatest feat and signaled to the boat-racing world that the site is truly back.

Madison Regatta Inc. and H1 Unlimited reached an agreement on Wednesday afternoon to bring the APBA Gold Cup — the oldest trophy in motorsports — back to Madison after a nearly 40-year absence.

The agreement, which is for two years, was the culmination of two years' worth of hard work as Regatta volunteers labored around the clock to bring the race site back to its former glory.

"Who would have thought? Thanks to H1 for trusting us as an organization," Regatta President Matt True said on the site's turnaround. "We've paid off all of our debt and that puts everybody in the state of mind to really partner up with them and have a bigger stake in the conversation.

"We've done a lot of research on what we needed to add to our festival to make it sustainable and they said add music and sell beer and that's what we did."

The Roostertail Music Festival, which brought in bands for two straight days of music, allowed the Regatta to turn a profit last year and put it in a position to pay off its outstanding debt to H1 Unlimited in the offseason and start from scratch.

With a level playing field, True and his board of directors turned their attention to upping the competition on the water. Last year, the Regatta optioned six boats from H1 Unlimited but only five showed, one of which only made it into one heat.

The answer for the Regatta was the Gold Cup. Officially called the APBA Challenge Cup, the Tiffany and Co.-designed trophy has long been the crown jewel of the sport, the one race coveted by all racers, young and old.

For the first 60 years of its life, the Gold Cup race was hosted by the defending champion. But starting in the early 1960s, it was awarded to the highest bidder and Madison played host in 1971, 1979 and 1980. The 1971 race, which was won by underdog Jim McCormick and the Miss Madison, has long been considered the top story in the history of the sport.

Since 1990, the Gold Cup has been the exclusive property of Detroit, which has hosted the race every year but in 2015 when Tri-Cities, Washington, held the race.

But Detroit has faced its own woes in recent years and last week, the site elected not to host the H1 Unlimited series and the Gold Cup this year.

That opened the door for True, who spent the past week negotiating with H1 Board of Directors Chairman Tim Austin on a possible race. As late as Tuesday afternoon, True wasn't optimistic that a deal could be reached.

But on Wednesday, the H1 board voted unanimously to accept Madison's offer and bring the Gold Cup to Madison.

"H1 Unlimited is very pleased that the Madison Regatta values the importance of the Gold Cup, its heritage and unlimited hydroplane racing," Austin said in a release.

Miss Madison President Charlie Grooms, who is also a member of the H1 Board of Directors, was pleased to see an agreement worked out to not only keep Madison in the series as a race site, but to also bring the Gold Cup to his hometown.

"Without question, it's exciting. From my perspective, we've worked hard to get H1 into position to do some better things for boat racing and the fans and we've got an opportunity here to enhance the fan experience so why not do it?" said Grooms, who served as H1's interim chairman until December. "I couldn't be happier for (Madison). They're making what appears to be great strides to make their event better, so how could you not want to try to help them?"

Miss HomeStreet/Miss Madison driver Jimmy Shane was ecstatic over the news and posted a message on Twitter shortly after the announcement went public.

"Yahoo! This should make the hometown race exciting for the @missmadisonrt team! Can't wait to have a shot at this trophy again! #goldcup #focused @HomeStreetBank," Shane wrote.

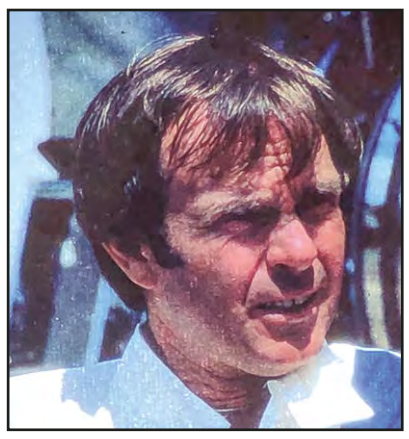
With the Gold Cup secured for the next two years, Madison's next task is to iron out the details. The deal with H1 Unlimited calls for six to eight boats, but the size of the current national fleet remains in question with only three teams committed to running the full circuit in 2019.

True also said the length of the race course — and whether to return to racing under the bridge — as well as sponsorships should be settled up in the coming weeks. The organization had already reached a deal for the Grand Prix World automotive-powered class to run the North American Championship at Madison this year.

Until then, the Regatta president plans to finally get in a good night sleep after several weeks of tossing and turning.

"This speaks volumes to the entire committee for their hard work and commitment to this event," True said. "We have come together, focused on the event and with everyone doing their part, we are a powerful team doing great things for Madison. We are listening to our fans and delivering the things they think are most important."

Madison APBA Gold Cup History



The American Power Boat Association Gold Cup has been contested on the Ohio River at Madison three times previously — 1971, 1979 and 1980. The late Dean Chenoweth drove the Griffon-powered Miss Budweiser to victory at the 1980 Madison Regatta Indiana Governor's Cup APBA Gold Cup race — the most recent running at Madison — the world's oldest motorsports trophy has spent time locally in recent years. The hometown Miss Madison Racing Team has won the Cup a total of four times with Jim McCormick's 1971 victory at Madison the most famous but Jimmy Shane's win in the Miss HomeStreet /Miss Madison at Detroit (above) in 2017 the most recent. IndyCar Series slowly and steadily returning to auto racing, relevance

By JENNA FRYER
AP Auto Racing Writer

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — IndyCar is ready to go racing again after six long months spent solidifying the business side of the series as it executes a five-year plan aimed at continued growth.

Scott Dixon wrapped up his fifth IndyCar championship last September. The months since have seen IndyCar land new title sponsorship from Japanese communications giant NTT, the transition to a single steady television partner in NBC Sports and a continued push toward expanding the grid and making it easier for new teams to crack the series.

"It feels good, like we have momentum again," said Jay Frye, who was promoted to president of IndyCar in December. "There's been a huge amount of work and it's been an organized process that we believe is working."

The series opens Sunday in St. Petersburg, where Sebastien Bourdais will go for his third consecutive victory on the streets of the Florida city he calls home. The starting grid will consist of 19 veterans, five classified rookies and three drivers making their IndyCar debut.

Among the newcomers are Felix Rosenqvist, the new teammate to Dixon at Chip Ganassi Racing, and Marcus Ericsson , who fills Robert Wickens' seat at Arrow Schmidt Peterson Motorsports. Santino Ferrucci (Dale Coyne Racing) and Colton Herta (Harding Steinbrenner Racing) are considered rookies but made at least one start last season.

Ericsson was winless in 97 Formula One starts and lost his ride after last season when Alfa Romeo signed Kimi Raikkonen. Rosenqvist is a former Formula 3 champion who spent three seasons in Formula E and ran a partial Indy Lights season in 2016.

"I'm looking forward to Felix, I think he can really help the program," said Dixon. "He's a big talent, fast, will raise our whole game and effort. Just something I think we really need to do, especially when you're competing against the likes of Penske and Andretti right now. Andretti are a great team right now. They've been doing a lot of good things."

Ericsson and Rosenqvist, both Swedes, followed the career change of Alexander Rossi, the American who abandoned his F1 pursuit after the 2015 season and in the three years since his move to IndyCar has won the Indianapolis 500 and took Dixon to the season finale in last year's championship race.

Rossi anchors Andretti Autosport with Ryan Hunter-Reay, whose championship in 2012 was an anomaly during a decade dominated by Ganassi and Team Penske. Ganassi has won six titles with Dixon and Dario Franchitti since 2008, while Penske drivers Will Power, Simon Pagenaud and Josef Newgarden each won a championship.

Andretti Autosport this week released a glossy video celebrating its team history, its powerful name and this year's four-driver lineup, which is the same for a second consecutive season for the first time in a decade.

Marco Andretti is starting his 14th season and seeking his first victory since 2001. The son of team owner Michael Andretti and grandson of IndyCar great Mario Andretti said the consistency should help the organization compete consistently with the Penske and Ganassi heavyweights.

"We all understand each other and our desires — how we like the car set up," Marco Andretti said. "I know some things Rossi or Hunter-Reay like don't necessarily fit my style, and they may not like what works for me. Everyone is comfortable with each other and we are all on the same page."

The 24 entries equal the size of last year's field, but is up three cars from two seasons ago. It's part of Frye's five-year plan that began in 2016 and focused on collaboration among series stakeholders to help IndyCar return to the buzz of its glory days 30 years ago.

The plan has produced a new car that earned strong reviews in last year's inaugural season. The number of passes during the season was improved, the series had eight different winners over 17 races and parity deep into the field.

"This is the second year of the new car and last year it performed at a very high level," Frye said. "The fans really like the look of a car, it very much has a historical feel to it, and in the second year of this product, we are sure that we can make it better."

NBC Sports will air eight events on NBC — up from five national events last year when ABC shared the package. NBC Sports has earned a strong reputation in the racing industry for its commitment to producing a top-notch product, and its booth of Leigh Diffey, Townsend Bell and Paul Tracy is among the smoothest in motorsports. Mike Tirico will host his inaugural Indianapolis 500 when the network hosts it for the first time in May.

The 500 has a growing number of entries — it has already passed the maximum 33 — ensuring there will be bumping for "The Greatest Spectacle In Racing" and the crown jewel of IndyCar. The field will include Fernando Alonso, the two-time Formula One world champion who has retired from that series in pursuit of his bucket list of world-renowned races. He will be competing in an independent effort for McLaren, the first step in what could be a return to IndyCar for the beloved organization.

IndyCar wants McLaren with the same enthusiasm it is chasing a third manufacturer for the series. It's been only Chevrolet and Honda since 2012, but Frye is hopeful another manufacturer could be on the track by 2021.

"There's lots of people who are very curious and interested in what we're doing, which is great," Frye said. "But obviously a lot of this is timing because this is a big commitment, but we are working on that."

Reds Schebler gets chance to fill shoes of speedy Hamilton

By GARY SCHATZ
Associated Press

GOODYEAR, Ariz. — The Cincinnati Reds are hoping Scott Schebler is at the center of their resurgence.

Following an offseason that saw a lot of turnover for the last-place Reds, they're beginning this year with Schebler in center field, taking over after the departure of Billy Hamilton.

Schebler doesn't have Hamilton's range or speed. Few players do.

But Schebler has played 49 games at the spot over the last three seasons. New manager David Bell has given Schebler the job, eager to see it he can make the transition from right field — by far his most familiar spot — and give Yaisel Puig a chance to settle in somewhere else in the outfield.

Schebler

"Schebler is going to play all over this spring, but I'm interested in seeing him in center field," Bell said. "It's valuable that he can play all three positions in the outfield. There's no question he can play at this level."

The question is how the Reds' new components fit together. They let Hamilton leave after years of trying unsuccessfully to improve his hitting. They got Puig and outfielder Matt Kemp from the Los Angeles Dodgers in a trade that provided Bell with several new options.

"It is kind of like going to a new school," Schebler said. "The first couple of days I was meeting people for the first time. It was like you're in a brand new clubhouse. You've kind of seen them play. You wonder what they're like."

The Reds got the 28-year-old Schebler from the Dodgers along with shortstop Jose Peraza after the 2015 season as part of a three-team trade that sent Todd Frazier to the White Sox. During his time in LA's farm system, Schebler got to know starter Alex Wood, who came to the Reds as part of the deal for Puig and Kemp.

All the new players have brought as sense of optimism to a team that has lost at least 94 games for four straight seasons.

"There is a lot of energy here," Schebler said.

Injuries have slowed Schebler the last two seasons. He missed 43 games last year with two stints on the disabled list. He suffered a bruised right elbow when hit by Sean Doolittle's pitch in April. He sprained his right shoulder when he ran into the outfield wall in July. He batted .255 with 17 homers and 49 RBIs.

"He has the ability to do a lot of damage," Bell said. "We see him as a big part of the team."

The Reds don't have a prototypical leader off hitter. They spent four seasons trying to get Hamilton to fill that role, without success. Schebler hasn't stolen more than five bases in a season. Outfielder Jesse Winker didn't steal a base in 89 games last season, but he batted first Monday in a game against the Cubs.

Given all the last-place finishes in recent years, players are willing to try new things under the new manager.

"We're willing to sacrifice all the individual stuff just to win," Schebler said.

Mets, Reds great Seaver diagnosed with dementia

By RONALD BLUM
AP Baseball Writer

NEW YORK — Hall of Fame pitcher Tom Seaver, the star of the Miracle Mets 1969 World Series championship team, has been diagnosed with dementia at age 74.

His family made the announcement Thursday through the Hall and said Seaver has retired from public life. He will continue to work at Seaver Vineyards, founded by the retired player and wife Nancy in 2002 on 116 acres at Diamond Mountain in the Calistoga region of California.

Seaver was diagnosed with Lyme disease in 1991, and it reoccurred in 2012 and led to Bell's Palsy and memory loss, the New York Daily News reported in 2013.

"He will always be the heart and soul of the Mets, the standard which all Mets aspire to, this breaks my heart," tweeted former Mets catcher Mike Piazza, a fellow Hall of Famer. "Do not feel worthy to be mentioned in the same breath."

Seaver has limited his public appearances in recent years. He did not attend the Baseball Writers' Association of America dinner in January where members of the 1969 team were honored on the 50th anniversary of what still ranks among baseball's most unexpected champions.

A three-time NL Cy Young Award winner and the 1967 NL Rookie of the Year, Seaver was 311-205 with a 2.86 ERA, 3,640 strikeouts and 61 shutouts from 1967-86. A five-time 20-game winner nicknamed Tom Terrific, Seaver was elected to the Hall in 1992 when he appeared on 425 of 430 ballots for a then-record 98.84 percent. His mark was surpassed in 2016 by Ken Griffey Jr. and this year by Mariano Rivera, the first unanimous selection.

Seaver pitched for the Mets from 1967 until 1977, when he was traded to Cincinnati after a public spat with Mets chairman M. Donald Grant over Seaver's desire for a new contract.

"My biggest disappointment? Leaving the Mets the first time and the difficulties I had with the same people that led up to it," Seaver told The Associated Press ahead of his Hall induction in 1992. "But even that I look back at in a positive way now. It gave me the opportunity to work in different areas of the country."

He pitched his only no-hitter for the Reds in June 1978 against St. Louis and was traded back to New York after the 1982 season. But Mets general manager Frank Cashen blundered by leaving Seaver off his list of 26 protected players, and in January 1984 Seaver was claimed by the Chicago White Sox as free agent compensation for losing pitcher Dennis Lamp to Toronto.

While pitching for the White Sox, Seaver got his 300th win at Yankee Stadium, and he did it in style with a six-hitter in a 4-1 victory. He finished his career with Boston in 1986. He was a 12-time All-Star and led the major leagues with a 25-7 record in 1969 and with a 1.76 ERA in 1971. The Mets retired his No. 41 in 1988.

"From a team standpoint, winning the '69 world championship is something I'll remember most," Seaver said in 1992. "From an individual standpoint, my 300th win brought me the most joy."

Aurora closes strong to edge Hanover LAX women, 10-9

COURIER STAFF REPORT
sports@madisoncourier.com

Hanover's women's lacrosse team managed just one goal in the second half while dropping a 10-9 decision to visiting Aurora (Illinois) on a snowy Thursday afternoon at Alumni Stadium on campus.

The Panthers put eight goals on the board in the first half to take an 8-6 lead into halftime but the saw their offensive production come to a halt in the second half.

Kinna Laymon, a junior from Fishers, got Hanover on the board less than a minute into the game when she took a pass from classmate Laurel Atchison and put the ball into the net for a 1-0 lead.

Atchison assisted on Hanover's next goal, by Meg Finn, and Emma Boomershine scored the next two goals on assists from Rachel Davis as the Panthers jumped on top 4-0 less than five minutes into the game.

Aurora battled back on goals by Claire Carlson, Marina Kanner and Ellie Blake to pull within one and the two teams traded goals the rest of the first half with Hanover getting two markers each from Laymon and Boomershine, and Aurora getting scores by Janne Brown, Margaret Flanagan and Kristian Krokosz for the 8-6 halftime score.

Aurora (1-2) quickly tied the score with a pair of goals by Carlson just two minutes into the second half but Hanover battled back when Boomershine stuck in a behind-the-back shot to knot the score at 9-9 with 10:26 left in the match.

But Aurora's Brown zinged a shot past goalkeeper Julia Long (2-2) with 9:07 remaining for what proved to be the game-winner.

Hanover spent the final 6:29 without taking a shot. The Panthers got the ball back with less than a minute left in the game, but were unable to get a clean look at the goal as Aurora dictated play in the closing minutes of the contest.

The Panthers outshot Aurora 26-21, but were outshot 9-7 in the second half. In free position shots, Aurora was 3-of-4 while Hanover went just 1-of-5 on such opportunities.

Boomershine, a junior from Louisville, had five goals and an assist to lead Hanover while Laymon added three scores. Davis, a senior from Indianapolis, had four assists.

Defensively, freshman Milah Young caused a turnover and had three groundballs while also corralling five draw controls. Goalkeeper Julia Long scooped up four groundballs and made six stops in net for the Panthers.

Hanover (2-3) plays its third home game of the week against Alma (Mich.) on Saturday.

Cancellations

Hanover baseball's weekend series with Calvin (Mich.), tennis match at Bellarmine Friday and and softball twinbill Saturday at Hope (Mich.) wee all canceled by inclement weather.

Aurora's Kristina Krokosz celebrates (above) after putting a shot past Hanover goalkeeper Julie Long (28) while the Panthers' Emma Boomershine (below, 4) fires a shot into the net on Aurora goalkeeper Reilly Armstrong and defender Caley Backstrom (19) and then celebrates with teammate Laurel Atchison (right) during the first half when Hanover took a 4-0 lead early and 8-6 at halftime. Aurora outscored Hanover 4-1 in the second half — including a go-ahead goal by Krokosz with 12:02 to play — to win 10-9 in women's lacrosse at Alumni Stadium in Hanover. Courier staff report

The Madison Consolidated High School Fine Arts Academy was host last Tuesday to the 81st annual Ohio Valley Choral Festival.

The festival, which was founded in 1937 by Bill Rothert of Madison, is the oldest of its kind in Indiana. The first festival — in 1938 — was in the Brown Memorial Gynasium in downtown Madison. This year's event was in the Connor K. Salm Gymnasium on the hilltop.

The high school choirs participating this year in addition to Madison were Charlestown, Jeffersonville, Lawrenceburg, New Albany, South Dearborn and Silver Creek.

Students prepared their music for months ahead and practiced all day Tuesday with Dr. Roosevelt Escalante Jr. from Moorehead University. Teresa Grayson, the choir director at Madison, was in charge of hosting this year's event. The festival moves among the participating schools.

Oak Heritage Park Hop scavenger hunt is underway

Courier staff report

How many benches are in this park? How many steps go to the top of a place in that park?

Jefferson County children and their families, and anyone else, can hunt for features at 21 parks, nature preserves and trails in the county as part of Oak Heritage Conservancy's Park Hop scavenger hunt.

Park Hop as a contest will begin Saturday and continue through the end of the month.

As something to do, it can be a year-round activity.

The first step for participation is to download a Passport at oakheritage-conservancy.org

The Passport has the list of parks and preserves and the clues. At the bottom of the page is an interactive map showing each park and preserve.

The Jefferson County Public Library, which is one of the conservancy's partners for Park Hop, has free public-use computers for people who have a library card, which is free.

In this scavenger hunt, participants don't collect items but instead answer questions posed by the clues.

Children younger than 18 can win prizes based on how many parks they visit and how many clues they find. Prizes will be awarded at the Park Hop Celebration from 1 p.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday, April 6, at Heritage Park, when there also will be hands-on nature activities and a marshmallow roast.

The locations for Park Hop are Clifty Falls State Park; Heritage Park; Heritage Trail; Webster Woods Nature Preserve; Bicentennial Park; Saluda Township Park; Hanover College trails; Gaines Park; Hanover Town Park; Hargan Matthews Park; Johnson Lake Park; Jaycee Park; John Paul Park; Kiwanis Park; Krueger Lake County Park; Lorenz Park; Skate Park, Park for All Children and Rucker Sports Complex; Oak Hill Park; Rainbow Park; Hatcher Hill Walking Trail; and Crooked Creek East Trail.

The Oak Heritage Conservancy got the idea for Park Hop from Greenville, South Carolina, said executive director Liz Brownlee. Greenville's first event was in 2013 and attracted 100 families. Greenville's event now is year-round and last year 11,000 children participated, she said.

In addition to the library, the conservancy's partners for Park Hop are the Duke Energy Foundation, the Community Foundation of Madison and Jefferson County, and Centene Corporation/Managed Health Services.

Hanover's Professor Robyn Ryle signs her new book on gender

Hanover College sociology professor Robyn Ryle signed copies of her book, "She/He/They/Me: For the Sisters, Misters, and Binary Resisters," Tuesday evening at the Village Lights Bookstore downtown.

Ryle read a portion of her book at a gathering after the signing, where guests asked questions about the book and author. The book delves into Ryle's understanding of the meaning of being a girl, boy or something else entirely, using more than 100 scenarios that incorporate definitions of gender from around the world, through history, and in today's society. Socializing with a skittish shelter dog

Annie Lane

Dear Annie: My new rescue dog is rather skittish. I think it's because he went through some awful things in his early life. From what I hear, he lived in disgusting conditions and in tight cages, getting shipped around from place to place. In my experience with him, this translates to his being nervous around most strangers and even growling at some of them. I think it's his way of pretending to be tough and scary. I can't see him actually hurting anyone. But obviously, I want to help my dog feel comfortable and safe around me, and I don't want him to scare people. What can I do to help him rebuild trust in his surroundings? — Nurturing a Nervous Newbie

Dear Nurturing a Nervous Newbie: Sounds as if you're providing a wonderful second chapter to this dog's life. Dogs that were not properly socialized as puppies can be socially uncomfortable. First, ensure your dog is all bark and no bite. If he shows a predilection to biting, you'll want to consult a professional to ensure you will be able to train away the bite inhibition. If he proves to be purely vocal and not mouthy, then take him into social situations. Bring treats and encourage strangers to say hello and reward him with a treat when he accepts the love without demonstrating any aggression. Remember to make sure strangers approach at a normal speed and allow the dog to sniff their hands first. Good luck, and thank you for choosing to adopt.

Dear Annie: I have never seen this issue addressed, and I think many TV viewers share my concern. The issue is the use of cellphones in many new TV shows. More and more, we are expected to read text messages in very small print on the actors' cellphones. Unless you are close to the TV or have a very large screen, it is nearly impossible to view what is being said. Often, this is crucial to the storyline, making it necessary to pause the show to view the text message. If producers would put the text on the screen as a subtitle in a larger font, it would certainly help the viewers of the show to understand all the dialogue between characters. I hope the producers will consider this change to benefit the viewing audience. — Hating Small Font

Dear Hating Small Font: I empathize with your plight. Unfortunately, television producers are unlikely to change how they display these texts. On the positive side, this TV trend of showing increasingly smaller text has coincided with improved technology that allows us to rewind and pause shows, so at least we have that defense.

If any of you readers have suggestions, please share.

Dear Annie: I think you missed an opportunity to offer another option to help "Committed but Confused" with her and her husband's intimacy problems. She indicated she has been married for 40 years, so she's probably in the perimenopausal years. There are many options for women whose libidos have declined with age. One is hormone replacement therapy, which includes several different options. One is hormone pellet insertion, which I have chosen. Within a month, many annoying symptoms of menopause were significantly reduced for me. Women should always explore the options with a physician who is up-to-date on recent research, because there are studies that have updated information about HRT. It can help turn around an entire marriage. — Nurse Who's Been There

Dear Nurse: You make a great point. Thank you for sharing.

BRIDGE

FROM TIMES PAST, MODERN BIDDING

John Betjeman, a former poet laureate in England, said, "Too many people in the modern world view poetry as a luxury, not a necessity like petrol. But to me it's the oil of life."

I came across this deal while rummaging through my records. South's wafer-thin opening bid suggests that it is of a modern vintage, but it was played in a tournament decades ago.

How should South play in four spades after West leads a low club?

Note that it pays to push for vulnerable games. Assuming duplicate scoring, if you can win 10 tricks in a major, you score either 170 or 620, depending on whether or not you bid the game. If you can win only nine tricks, your result is plus 140 or minus 100. If the game makes half the time, you will be, on average, 105 points per deal better off if you always bid game.

The first South rose with dummy's club king and took an immediate spade finesse. It lost, East received a club ruff, and the defenders cashed three red-suit tricks for down two.

The second declarer won with his club jack and led a diamond toward the dummy. He paid an equally heavy price. West went in with the ace and led the club eight. East ruffed and, reading the eight as a suit-preference signal, returned the heart four. West won with the ace and played a heart back to East's king. Then a third heart promoted West's spade king for down two.

The last declarer won trick one with the club jack and laid down the spade ace. Bingo -- the king appeared. South now had only three red-suit losers. Sometimes it pays to be a little lucky.

FAMILY CIRCLE

THE FAMILY CIRCUS By Bil Keane

"Before he opened this, he had a farm."

Band of Gold members participate in honor clinic

Multiple Shawe Memorial Jr.-Sr. High School Band of Gold members recently participated in the 2019 Morehead State University High School Honor Band Clinic from Feb. 14 to Feb. 16. Students were selected based on audition recordings sent to the college. While at the clinic, students rehearsed and performed with fellow outstanding band members from four surrounding states over a period of three days. Participants included (left to right) Nolan Tandy, Trey Suggett, Christian Whitham, Emma Belt, Karina Rodrigues, Jaylin Lee, Charity Green, Julia Ott and (front) Andy Furnish.

"The Morehead clinic, in it's 60th year, is one of the finest events of it's kind in the entire country and it is both an honor and a great experience for these kids," said Bill Gordon band director for the Band of Gold. "My trumpets got to meet one of the premier trumpet players in the world, Greg Wing. Here's a guy who spent a great deal of his career performing in Las Vegas with the likes of Frank Sinatra, Sammy Davis Jr., Paul Anka, Natalie Cole and Tom Jones, and he's giving our students a clinic."

3 area cosmetology students advance to state competition

Three Courierarea students at the Southeastern Career Center's Postsecondary Cosmetology school placed in the Indiana Skills USA Regionals Competition and will advance to the state competition in April.

Elizabeth Griffith won first place overall at regionals. She joined the Southeastern Career Center after graduating from Batesville High School in 2018. Burns works now as a receptionist in a salon.

Kendra Burns won second place overall at regionals.
